

YESTERDAY'S GAMES STRONG ON THE UNEXPECTED

George Washington Gets Severe Jolt At Aggies' Hands

Coach Neilson's Squad Shows Itself Well Up in New Tactics—Hatchettes Employ Obsolete Methods.

Md. Ag. Col., 11; George Wash., 0.

The fast, aggressive, and snappy team of the Maryland Agricultural College threw a severe jolt into George Washington University yesterday at Van Ness Field by defeating the local team 11 to 0.

It was practically the initial appearance of the local team with its new line-up, and the article of football played by the contesting teams was fast enough to give the spectators a general idea of the new rules. George Washington outwitted the Maryland athletes, but in a knowledge of the new game, in taking advantage of new plays, and in being in the right place at the right time for the forward passes, which were used extensively, the visitors had much the advantage. George Washington was lamentably weak in the elementary stages of the game, failing to hold the ball properly and fumbling frequently. One of the touchdowns scored by the out-of-town fraternity was the result of old football, the local ends being drawn in on a fake buck at center, then the Maryland Agricultural quarterback went around the end for a touchdown. Another fault prevalent among the local players was the steady hammering of the line—in a word, the local team played old football instead of new football, and the opponents reversed the tables.

Byrd and Cooper Stars.

For the visitors Cooper and Byrd were the stellar attractions and in Cooper the Farmers have a player who will bear watching. He is fast, a clever dodger, and strong. His work at left half yesterday contributed largely to the victory. Byrd, captain of the team who plays the quarterback position, ran his team well, giving out signals before the men were off the ground, and in several instances caught the local napping.

Trouble at Start.

Prior to the game, considerable wrangling ensued between the coaches as to the length of halves, Maryland contending for two ten-minute halves, while the local coach, Neilson, insisted on two twenty-minute halves. The matter was finally adjusted by the tossing of a coin, and Gunning, captain of George Washington, won.

George Washington likewise won the toss for goals and Dook, of Maryland, kicked off to Baker, who fumbled. Short gains were made alternately around right tackle and left tackle. Gunning was unable to get the ball first down and George Washington kicked, Maryland returning the ball six yards. A forward pass was attempted, but the ball was called back owing to an offside play, and the visitors were penalized.

Washington secured the ball and off-side plays were so frequent that penalties resulted. Cooper's work was strong, and he eluded tackler after tackler on forward runs. Maryland tried another forward pass and it worked beautifully, the left halfback and end figuring, and before the left end could be stopped the ball was in front of George Washington's goal on the 30-yard line. Here it was that Byrd showed his headwork, and shoved a fake line buck into center, Witten was drawn in and the ball was planted between the goal posts for the first touchdown. Mackall kicked an easy goal.

More Line Hammering.

Mackall again kicked off for Maryland, but as George Washington was off side on the kick-off, Umpire Kirby called the ball back, and Maryland received the benefit of five yards. Baker caught the ball on the next kick, but was speedily downed. In the scrimmage Lunn, of the Maryland team, was laid out, and it was discovered that his shoulder had been thrown out. After several doctors had worked on him, he pluckily resumed play.

George Washington then resorted to the old line-hammering, working in a pass occasionally, but never pulling off one successfully. Maryland tried the same play which had given them the touchdown, and again got away with it, but Byrd was downed after going twenty yards. From then on the two teams worked up and down the field, George Washington using the old style of line plunges, Maryland playing new football, both teams kicking frequently on the third down, but Maryland having far the advantage on catching punts. After an outside kick, Maryland tried a forward pass, and Pierce, profiting by the fumble, picked up the ball and ran for forty yards. He was downed, and Washington kicked at once.

Washington kicked again, and Cooper got the ball and started down the field with it, straight across Gunning and Sommers, and covered forty yards before he was thrown. Time was called with the ball on Washington's 25-yard line.

The local team kicked off at the beginning of the second half, and Maryland immediately returned the ball, the visiting ends downing the runner near midfield. Then George Washington started for what looked like a touchdown, working away at left tackle. Maryland held for downs, then used a double and forward pass combined. The quarter gave the ball to right half, who in turn shot it to the left halfback, and it was thrown by him to the end. The play was tried four or five times before it worked successfully, but netted good gains when it was pulled off. George Washington's goal was in danger twice in the early part of the second half, but by holding on the third down, the Aggies were kept from crossing until later.

Maryland took the count frequently in the second half, because of injured men, Byrd being the chief offender. The ball was in George Washington's territory most of the time, and Mackall booted the ball over Baker's head and when it was recovered it was on George Washington's 20-yard line.

George Washington kicked, and Maryland, using Cooper, carried the pigskin back to the same place. Hammering away at left end and left tackle, Cooper made consistent gains, but George Washington again rose to the occasion and took the ball away. Maryland worked steadily, and soon shoved Cooper over for the second touchdown. Mackall failed at the goal, the ball hitting the posts. Score, George Washington, 9; Maryland Agricultural College, 11.

George Washington, with eight minutes to play, again indulged in the same tiresome line plugging, and after this never had a chance to score.

Episcopal High Plays Good Game Against Weight

Port Deposit, Md., Oct. 26.—Tome defeated the Episcopal High School of Alexandria, Va., 46 to 6.

The High School deserved great credit for the way they fought it out against the superior weight. Tome made only twelve points during the first twenty-five minutes of play. The visitors held her for downs three times within her 5-yard line.

Episcopal's touchdown came from a blocked forward pass, and she did not make a single first down rushing the ball. Three of Tome's regulars were not in the game, but their places were well filled by Wise, Thompson, and Browne. Pendleton and Dabney put up a great game for the Episcopal High School. Episcopal's offense was played well for Tome, and Mason did some of the finest running seen on the field this year.

BROOKLAND LOSES TO METHODISTS

R. I. M., 5; Brookland, 0.

Rhode Island Methodists beat the fast Brookland eleven yesterday afternoon by 5 to 0.

The contest was not started until about 5:30 the teams were compelled to play very short halves, the first fifteen, the second ten minutes. Referee—DeMotte. Timekeeper—Mr. Musgrove.

Both teams played football and the struggle, while it lasted, was both exciting and interesting. The Rhode Island eleven was composed of a number of former scholastic stars and showed plainly the effects of the good coaching they have received, working outside kicks and forward passes with much success.

The game was on when Palmer kicked to Tansil, who returned the ball five yards. Brookland was forced to punt, and the ball went to Brookland, who brought the ball back to Brookland's 20-yard line, whence, after a series of line plunges, Palmer was shoved over the line.

As darkness was falling fast the second half was started immediately. McDougal kicked to Le Mat on the 20-yard line. Rhode Island Avenue then pushed the ball within hailing distance of the goal.

Tigers Lose to Cornell

Princeton Was a Big Favorite in the Betting.

Cornell, 6; Princeton, 5.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 26.—It was a sadder and tamer Tiger that dragged his badly twisted tail off Percy Field this afternoon at the close of the Princeton-Cornell game. The score was 6 to 5 in favor of the Ithacans.

Princeton was a 5 to 2 favorite, and so cocky were the wearers of the Orange and Black before the game that they offered odds that they would win by more than 15 per cent.

The first half resulted in a brilliant kicking duel, with honors just about even. As the whistle ended the first half it was Princeton's ball on her own 15-yard line, the nearest the oval came to either goal during the first half. In the second session Cornell, encouraged by her strong showing, made a brilliant start. A forward pass, an end run, and a line smash following a charge of punts at the kick-off took the ball to Princeton's 8-yard line. McCalle hit the Princeton line for four yards, and Waller reached the 1-yard line before he was dragged down. It took Cornell two tries to negotiate the remaining yard, but Waller did the trick, and kicked the goal after having kicked out to Gardner.

Rushing Tactics.

Rushing tactics, following the kick-off, with a couple of successful forward passes, enabled the Ithacans to again take the ball to Princeton's 1-yard line. Here a fumbled forward pass gave the Tigers the ball, and it was quickly booted out of danger.

Princeton then took a wonderful brace. Cornell apparently weakening, and the Tigers rushed the oval to Cornell's 20-yard line, where the Ithacans held the game the team did the trick.

Phillips failed to kick an easy goal, and the score was Cornell, 6; Princeton, 5.

Costly Fumble.

Princeton, much stronger than Cornell, started in to play the latter off their feet. A fumble at one time and a wild forward pass at another proved costly to Princeton, however, and with a couple of minutes to play Dillon held a fair catch on Cornell's 42-yard line.

McCormack's attempt at a goal from placement was weak, and time was called following the kick-out.

The luck of the contest was with Cornell, but she won on her merits. The contest was clean and snappy, and a brilliant game, owing to the frequent punting and use of the forward pass.

Mt. Washington Wins Easily In Baltimore

Mountaineers Had Little Trouble With U. S. Navy School.

Mt. Washington, 29; U. S. N. S., 0.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 26.—Mt. Washington romped away with the United States Navy School this afternoon, running up 29 points to 0.

It was more like the real thing in football than has been seen on the Mt. Washington field this fall, and a large crowd enjoyed the contest. The big score of the Mountaineers was not due so much to the Navy's weakness as to the strength of the Blue and Gray team. With the Navy people it was a case of being outclassed from start to finish, and having an opponent with much superior team work.

In the first half the Navy started out strong, but after about ten minutes' play Roy Nelson caught an on-side kick by Stonecipher and ran thirty-five yards for a touchdown. Bayless kicked the goal. The second and final touchdown in the first half was made by Stonecipher after Bayless and Rider had brought the ball down the field by terrific line plunging. Bayless again kicked the goal, making the score 12 to 0.

In the second half the Mountaineers swept their opponents off their feet, and before the half was ended had scored three touchdowns. Bayless kicked two of the goals.

PENN'S LOSS TO CARLISLE A SURPRISE

Indians Had Quakers on the Move From Start.

Carlisle, 26; Pennsylvania, 6.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 26.—Casting consternation into their enemies' ranks as did their ancestors, the Carlisle Indians today easily defeated the University of Pennsylvania football eleven by 26 to 6.

The Indians simply played the Red and Blue off their feet.

With the natural stoicism of their race the visitors nonchalantly went into the enemies' country time and time again. They began their tactics right at the start. They smashed Pennsylvania's line as if it were made of straw. It only required a few moments of play for the Redskins to score a goal from placement.

The Carlisle men showed a more general knowledge of the game than did their adversaries. They worked the forward pass to perfection. After Pennsylvania had failed, again gave the Red and Blue no chance to try their offensive plays.

Spectacular Run.

The particular feature of the game was Hendricks' sensational run for the full length of the field. With the ball on the Indians' 5-yard line, at a critical stage of the game, a fumble gave the Indian right halfback the ball. Aided by wonderful interference, he went the entire length of the field, scoring a touchdown.

Not until the second half did the Red and Blue score a touchdown. Then they showed the form they had displayed the last few weeks, and at only this stage of the game did the Carlisle line weaken. It was only a temporary weakness, however, and after Pennsylvania had crossed their goal line the Indians were imbued with renewed strength, completely shutting out the Quakers. Score:

First half—	Indians.....16	Pennsylvania.....0
Second half—	Indians.....10	Pennsylvania.....6
Final score—	Indians.....26	Pennsylvania.....6

NAVY BRACES UP AND TAKES GAME FROM LAFAYETTE

Fumbling Disappears and Teamwork Is Conspicuous Factor.

Navy, 17; Lafayette, 0.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 26.—The midshipmen put up such a rattling good game this afternoon that they were able to win from Lafayette by the decisive score of 17 to 0, whereas almost any kind of a win would have been all that could have been expected on account of the many recent changes in the team.

The game was a brilliant affair from the Navy standpoint, and Douglass and Lange would frequently delight the Annapolis crowd with their splendid runs. Captain Douglass got in the longest run of the game, run back of a kick-off for fifty yards, but Lange time after time electrified the crowd with his splendid runs of fifteen to thirty yards, starting after having received a kick or from his position.

Navy Shows Brains.

Navy played much the headiest game that it has put up this season, and the plays which it worked from the kick formation particularly kept the visitors guessing. Douglass, who did the punting, would often run from the kick formation, and several times got away for substantial gains. There was also a forward pass play from the kick arrangement that worked well. Several times after Navy had reached within striking distance of the goal, Lange worked one of these plays, which he had apparently dropped back to try for a field goal. It was in this way that the first touchdown was scored.

Encouraging Exhibition.

Altogether, Navy put up an exhibition which gave the greatest encouragement to everyone connected with it. Lange quite redeemed himself for the fumbles of last Saturday, and his playing in every department was most brilliant. Dague was fast at right end, and tackled with tremendous force. The line men, without exception, were steady.
